

Restoration Window Glass

McGrory Glass stocks several varieties of Restoration Window Glass to meet the needs of all restoration and renovation projects. We can supply authentic hand blown glass to match the existing structures historic requirements or similar products to meet budgetary constraints. McGrory can furnish several of these products either tempered or laminated to meet today's stringent building codes.

Because we are a stocking distributor of Restoration Window Glass, we can offer you single source solutions on all of your restoration and historical glazing requirements.

Three primary categories of manufacturing processes for Restoration Window Glass are: Mouth-blown, Machine Drawn, and Rolled. Some recent advancement have allowed for larger sizes and tempering capabilities of some "restoration type" glazing.

Old World Colonial (Pre-1900's)

This mouth-blown glass is made in Europe the same way it has been for hundreds of years by master craftsmen. If your historic project requires blown-glass from 1900 or earlier, this is your glass. It is available in (3) categories; light, medium and heavy distortion.

Colonial Antique (1900-1950)

Colonial Antique is a machine drawn restoration window glass. This is the most widely used glass for restoration purposes for the time period of 1900-1950. It is also used when tempering, size limitations or budget considerations preclude the use of hand-blown glass. Several textures and variations are available to meet your project requirements.

Rolled Restoration

Rolled restoration window glass is similar to Old World style glass with subtle antique characteristics. It is characterized by a gentle wave, limited seed content and consistent thickness / sheet size. If you are looking for a realistic antique glass to refurbish furniture or buildings at a reasonable price, this is your best option.
